And we all remember how it occurs in the Psalms, Blessed be the Lord God of Israel for everlasting; and let all the people say, Amen². And further, that it was customary for the people thus to answer in the early Christian Churches, we find from an allusion to it in St. Pauls letter to the Corinthian Church. For in speaking of the necessity of all persons understanding the Psalms and Prayers that were offered up, he says, How shall he that occupieth the room of the unlearned say Amen at thy giving of thanks, seeing he understandeth not what thou sayest³ And in the Revelation of St. John we are told, that when every creature worshipped Him that sat on the throne, and the Lamb, that the four beasts said. Amen Now we have seen that it is a positive command of God in the Old Testament, that all the people shall join in with the priests and Levites in saying, Amen. And St. Paul speaks of it as a part of Divine worship most necessary for every one: how shall the unlearned--i. e. common people in the Church--say Amen. For this he implies is quite indispensable for every one; and also that they should understand the Prayers, so as to be able to follow them with their thoughts and desires, and then to be able to say, Amen. And surely if it is commanded under the Old Testament that all should with one voice...
