Your Committeetake the liberty of appending to the report the following brief history of the Chemical Department, which formed the closing part of Professor Piggots introductory Lecture, and which that genileman has kindly allowed them to insert here. The credit of suggesting the establishment of a Chemical School attached to the Institute, belongs to Dr. Campbell Morfit. His proposition to the Maryland Institute was the first movement towards such a desirable end ever made in our State. On the 26th March, 1851, he addressed a letter to the Board of Managers, presenting his views and plans, and asking their co-operation with him in the undertaking. The plan presented was that of a regular School of Analytical and Applied Chemistry. There was to be a working Laboratory of several apartments suitably furnished and adapted for instruction in every branch of the Science. It was to contain rooms for Analysis, for Assaying, for Furnace, Gaseous and Pharmaceutical operations and for Lectures. Practical Chemistry, in its application to the Arts and Sciences, was to be especially attended to, and every effort was to be made to impart to the workman a clear understanding of the principles upon which his various...
